What's New in the TomTom MyDrive Connect?

MyDrive, the ultimate driving experience, never stops. Tracking your driving routes, history, speed and fuel consumption, MyDrive keeps you in control of your driving experience. The MyDrive map, an incredible companion to your navigation device, provides you with the freshest and most accurate maps available. The application is designed to simplify the process of updating your navigation device and managing it. You will have access to the latest maps and regular software updates, and you will also be able to renew your services whenever necessary. The application does not require you to download or install anything else, so you should be able to keep your device updated without needing any assistance. The app is designed to work on Mac OS X and Windows, making it a fairly universal choice. All you need to do is get it running on your computer, and you will be good to go. Once you have the app running, you will be able to access your driving history, map locations, speed, and even contact your friends with an in-app chat service. You can even allow third-party services to access your device, using one of the provided APIs, so you can customize it as you see fit. MyDrive Connect is a useful tool that should be added to your computer regardless of which device you use. I would really like to have Tomtom give some of the older gps units a make over. Our Tomtom 350 now has the new satelite ready maps. But I still have my old 310 and would like it to be more versitle to take advantage of the new satelite ready maps. Tomtom 250 is an example of an older GPS device that has been updated. I have one and it is great. It is the PC Link, but it is good for portable use. The big question is why does it still use the older Garmin maps? I own an old V100, and I have a new V200 GPS which is telling me to download maps for some reason. I don't know why that is, I thought that the maps that I downloaded for the V100 were for the V200. I have since manually downloaded the maps, but I still get the message to download maps from the web, which I do not want to do because of the long download times. I went back to the website and noticed that it says that I should have a land line, but I am not using a land line. I have tried the *#7610# but it doesn't
